1. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

In 1990, Advanced Education completed a survey of programs and services for students of native ancestry in the public post-secondary institutions. This report highlights current enrolments and specific programs that are of particular interest to native students. It also expands upon a similar survey completed in 1988.

Students Enrolled in Public Post-Secondary Institutions:

1. When the first survey was completed in 1987-88, over 4300 students of native ancestry were reported to be enrolled in public post-secondary institutions.

2. In 1989-90, the survey reported 5260 native students enrolled in Alberta public post-secondary institutions (excluding 615 off-campus registrants at Athabasca University). This is an increase of 22% in three years. More than 3650 (69%) of these students were enrolled in full-time, on-campus programs.

3. In 1989-90, native students were reported to be enrolled in the following areas of the public post-secondary system:

Institution	# of Students	% of Total
AVC's	2897	55%
Colleges	1412	27%
Universities	558	11%
Technical Institutes	393	7%
Total	5260	100%

4. Changes in enrolments were reported:

AVC's
- full-time enrolments increased 112% from 1226 students in 1987-88 to 2603 in 1989-90.
- part-time enrolments increased 238% from 87 in 1987-88 to 294 in 1989-90.

Universities
- full-time enrolments increased 16% from 417 students in 1987-88 to 484 in 1989-90.

Colleges
- full-time enrolments decreased 17% from 1594 students in 1987-88 to 1322 in 1989-90.
- part-time enrolments increased 200% from 30 1987-88 to 90 in 1989-90.

Technical Institutes
- full-time enrolments decreased 75% from 348 students in 1987-88 to 95 in 1989-90.
- part-time enrolments increased 88% from 35 in 1987-88 to 298 in 1989-90.

5. In 1989-90, 836 native students graduated from institutional credit programs. This is a 66% increase over the 504 students who graduated in 1987-88. Most of these 425 graduates were from the AVC's.

6. Of the 20 institutions surveyed, all provide some on-campus post-secondary support services for native students. In 1989-90, for the 5260 native students enrolled, the following services were provided:

Support Services	Number of Native Students Served
Counselling	2059
Tutorial	676
Housing	450
Orientation	2201
Financial	1844
Social Clubs	480
Recruitment	1959
Daycare	95

(The total number of services provided (9800) far exceeded the total native student enrolments because students frequently received more than one support service.)

7. The survey also found that 47% of the special services were provided by the AVC's and 42% by the universities. Counselling, tutorial, orientation and financing were the most common support services provided.

The University of Alberta, AVC-Lac La Biche, Fairview College, Grant MacEwan Community College and Lethbridge Community College report plans to expand these services.

8. Several institutions offer programs of special interest to native students:

-University of Alberta:
  -Native Studies program.
  -Transition Year program.

-The University of Lethbridge:
  -Department of Native American Studies.
  -Business Enterprises and Self-Governing Systems of the Indian, Inuit and Metis (B.E.S.S.) program.
  -The Native American Teacher Education program.

-Grant MacEwan Community College:
  -Native Communications.
  -Native Women Pre-Employment programs.

-Lethbridge Community College, AVC-LLB and AVC-LSL:
  -Native arts and language courses/programs catering to local students of native ancestry.

Students Enrolled in On-Reserve Programs:

1. There were between 840-980 full-time students enrolled annually in on reserve post-secondary programs, offered by public post-secondary institutions, between 1987-88 and 1989-90. Funding for these programs came primarily from Indian and Northern Affairs Canada (INAC), Health and Welfare Canada, Employment and Immigration Canada and the bands.

2. In 1989-90, native students were reported to be enrolled in on-reserve programs offered through Alberta public post-secondary institutions as follows:

Institution	# of Students	% of Total
AVC's	175	20
Colleges	591	68
Universities	75	9
Technical Institutes	23	3
TOTAL	864	100

3. Changes in enrolments were reported:

AVC's
- full-time enrolments increased 20% from 145 students in 1987-88 to 174 in 1989-90.
- part-time enrolments decreased from 61 students in 1987-88 to one student in 1989-90.

Universities
- full-time enrolments increased 56% from 48 students in 1987-88 to 75 in 1989-90.

Colleges
- part-time enrolments increased 31% from 13 students in 1987-88 to 17 in 1989-90.

Technical Institutes
- full-time enrolments decreased 85% from 81 students in 1987-88 to 12 in 1989-90.
- part-time enrolments increased from 0 students in 1987-88 to 11 students in 1989-90.

4. Almost 30% of the 864 on-reserve students were enrolled in upgrading/life skills courses.

5. There was a marked increase in the number of students enrolled in workshops on reserves; 555 students in 1989-90, an increase of 229 students (70%) from 1987-88.

6. Between 1987-88 and 1989-90, over 1020 students graduated from on-reserve credit programs; 38% from the AVC's, 35% from colleges, 25% from technical institutes and 2% from universities.

7. Fewer post-secondary support services were provided for students in on-reserve programs than through the on-campus programs. Of the 20 institutions surveyed, 9 (45%) provided some special support services for students in on-reserve programs.

II. PREFACE

During the past ten years, parents, native leaders and governments have emphasized the need for more educational opportunities and services for students of native ancestry. Some of this interest has been reflected in new educational initiatives in primary, elementary and secondary schools. Several of these projects are operated by native communities. With increased enrolments in basic and secondary education, it is projected that more students of native ancestry will want to enroll in post-secondary programs.

While there is a common perception that more native students are participating in post-secondary education, there has been a lack of current information on these enrolments or the kinds of post-secondary programs and services that students of native ancestry select. In order to improve the level of information on this important issue, an initial survey: Students of Native Ancestry - Enrolments, Programs and Support Services, in Alberta Public Post-Secondary Institutions, was completed in 1988. The current survey builds upon the initial survey and also includes a section about on-reserve programs offered in cooperation with the public post-secondary institutions.

A sincere thank-you is extended to the contact people appointed by each of the post-secondary institutions. Their cooperation and assistance in gathering the information used in this report was most appreciated. This task was not easy because many terms and definitions are not used consistently across the post-secondary system and there is no formal mechanism to identify or record information about students of native ancestry. A list of contact people is attached in Appendix A and a list of abbreviations and definitions used are attached in Appendices B and C.

A special thanks is extended to all of the many other people who also contributed to this project, and to Florence Pastoor, summer research assistant, who bravely prepared the questionnaires and completed the initial interviews.

III. BACKGROUND

The programs and services offered by the Alberta public post-secondary institutions have evolved in response to a variety of social, economic and political expectations of Albertans. While all eligible students may seek admission to these programs, the province has acknowledged, for geographic and historical reasons, that certain accommodations should be made to assist some students to overcome particular challenges to their participation in post-secondary education. Examples of these accommodations are: the northern Alberta Vocational Colleges that grew out of the federal/provincial Alberta New Start program in the 1960s; development of regional institutions such as Fairview, Keyano and Lakeland Colleges; and establishment of Athabasca University with a distance-delivery format. These initiatives, to address regional/rural issues, have frequently also been of benefit to regional students of native ancestry. Native leaders, native students, educators and other interested parties readily acknowledge that a variety of accommodations have been made, however much still needs to be done because the participation of native students in post-secondary programs is still proportionally much less than it is for the non-native population.

In addition to the foregoing, several post-secondary institutions have established particular initiatives to respond to the needs of native students in their region. These responses include special on-campus programs and services, outreach offerings, and brokering arrangements in cooperation with native-run institutions, such as the Blue Quills Native Education Centre, Old Sun College and Maskwatchees College. These on-reserve offerings are normally funded by Indian and Northern Affairs Canada (INAC), Health and Welfare Canada or the band council.

3.1 Objectives

The primary objective of this survey was to obtain the most accurate and current information available on the programs and services that are regularly provided by the public post-secondary institutions to assist students of native ancestry accomplish their educational goals. A second objective of the survey was to obtain initial information about special programs and services offered on reserves by the public post-secondary institutions.

The survey focused on the following:

a) Programs,
-title,
-length,
-location (on campus or off campus).

b) Enrolments/Graduates, the best estimate of enrolment/graduate data for students of native ancestry.

c) Support Services, the kinds of special or regular support services frequently utilized by students of native ancestry, including:
-a brief description of each service,
-an estimate of the number of students who used the service in the 1989-90 academic year, and
-any institutional plans to improve, or implement additional support services to assist students of native ancestry.

3.2 Methodology

Following pilot testing, the survey questionnaires were sent to the public post-secondary institutions in late May 1990. Telephone interviews with the contact people were then initiated and all interviews were completed by August 1990.

To ensure that the data obtained from the institutions were understood and recorded accurately, a summary of the data was returned to the respective institutions and confirmed (or modified) by the contact people by September 1990.

3.3 Limitations of the Study (Read carefully)

The writers and institutional contact people are aware that there is currently no comprehensive and independently verifiable source of information on enrolments of native students. The institutions do not have an existing mechanism or sufficient reason to collect student data based on ethnic or cultural background. While this was a major challenge, the contact people were asked to provide their best estimates of enrolments and support service utilization rates by students of native ancestry, based on student self-reporting and the expertise of the contact people. Initially, there was some hesitancy on the part of the institutional contact people and the survey staff to collect and report the data under these circumstances. However, since the data are an estimate of current activity, and the information can be of assistance to both institutional and department staff to better understand current situation, the contact people agreed to do their best in responding to the survey.

Readers are cautioned to remember that data in this report are limited to the extent that they are based on voluntary self-reporting by students and the experience of the institutional contact people. The reader should also be aware that since some of the institutions have special support services for students of native ancestry, their data on the number of students of native ancestry may be more accurate than are the data of institutions where these services are not offered. While there is no formal mechanism to positively identify native students within the post-secondary system, we are not persuaded that the advantages of such a formal mechanism are sufficient to outweigh the possible disadvantages that such a system might have for the native students and others.

A major challenge with the survey was classifying data about programs and services that are specifically offered for and funded by the federal government or band council for Indian students from reserves, but the programs are not actually offered on reserves. An example is the special programs offered through the Yellowhead Tribal Council in Stony Plain. For the purposes of this report, these kinds of programs were classified as on-reserve programs. Another challenge was the difficulty many of the institutions had distinguishing between full and part-time credit students, between credit and workshop enrolments, and between course registrations and F.T.E.s. While many of these concerns result from a lack of common definitions, the issues were resolved with the institutional contacts to make the data as consistent as possible between institutions.

IV. ANALYSIS OF INSTITUTIONAL PROGRAMS AND SERVICES

This section of the report summarizes and reviews the survey results by type of post-secondary institution: universities, colleges, technical institutes and AVC's.

4.1 Universities

The number of students of native ancestry enrolled in university programs in the 1989-90 academic year was:

V. ANALYSIS OF ON-RESERVE PROGRAMS AND SERVICES

This section of the report summarizes and reviews the survey results by type of post-secondary institution: universities, colleges, technical istitutes and AVC's.

5.1 Universities

The number of students enrolled in on-reserve (or equivalent) university programs from 1987-88 to 1989-90 was:

TABLE 5.1.1: STUDENT ENROLMENTS IN ON-RESERVE UNIVERSITY PROGRAMS, 1987-88 TO 1989-90

On-reserve support services were provided by Athabasca University, and the Universities of Alberta and Lethbridge. The universities did not report any plans for change or further expansion of these services.

The universities report that students were enrolled in a variety of programs. Most of these programs provide the first one or two years of a degree program and then the students normally enroll on-campus to complete the program. While this is typical, some graduates were reported from on-reserve programs:

On-reserve college support services were provided by Keyano and Lethbridge Community Colleges. Fairview, Keyano, Lethbridge Community and Red Deer Colleges report plans for further expansion of these services.

The colleges report that 361 students graduated from a variety of on-reserve Alberta programs between 1987-88 and 1989-90:

-There are no plans to change or expand these services.

-The services are promoted through pamphlets and during orientation.

-The institution's students' union does not currently offer any special support services to native students. However, it is considering closer formal links with the existing Native American Students' Association possibly through a native student commissioner who would consult with both organizations. The students' union offers services to all students regardless of ancestry, and is funded through student fees.

-Through its membership in the Council of Alberta University Students and the Canadian Federation of Students, the institution's students' union has committed money and directed lobbying efforts at enhancing accessibility of post-secondary education to native students at provincial and federal government levels.

PROGRAMS:

-The institution's entire raison d'etre is to provide educational programs for local people, many of whom are native.

-Whenever possible, native instructors are hired to teach courses/ programs. AVC grants education leaves to native employees for the purpose of assisting them in completing their education (e.g. diplomas, degrees). Cree language courses have been offered in the past. All new instructors and employees are encouraged to attend cross-cultural workshops in order to prepare them better for multi-cultural settings. The curriculum is modified to suit the needs of the students, local examples and concerns are incorporated into lessons. AVC-LSL is working with other agencies on a Native Teacher Education proposal which will allow for the training of local people to work in northern Alberta.

SUPPORT SERVICES:

-No formal support services are available on reserves to students of native ancestry; however, the college staff extend themselves to offer non-instructional support. Such services are critical since students' needs are often primarily non-academic.

-It is hoped that an NDA funded counselling position in High Level will soon be on-stream to provide some assistance.

PROGRAMS:

–The institution responds to ad hoc requests from reserves when it can deliver a quality program on a cost–recovery basis. The college has no plan to change this policy. The implication of responding to ad hoc requests is that new programs and courses will continually be offered. For instance, the college is currently exploring the delivery of introductory Business Administration and introductory Social Work at Onion Lake.
